The History of Massasoit

The person after whom the College is named is Massasoit (or "great chief"), who was a chief of the Wampanoag tribe at the time of the Pilgrims' arrival. Massasoit's story has been enhanced by legend, but the help he afforded the first settlers is beyond dispute.

One version of the story of Massasoit begins in March of 1621 when an English speaking Indian named Samoset entered the town of Plymouth and greeted the settlers with the words, "Welcome, Englishmen!"

Samoset, Massasoit's representative, prepared the way for the arrival of Massasoit, who proceeded to negotiate an agreement of non aggression and mutual assistance with the English. This treaty has been called the first formal act of diplomacy in the history of New England.

Massasoit Community College

Massasoit Community College was founded in September, 1966. The College, consisting of 358 students and 22 faculty, held its first classes in the Charles M. Frolio School in North Abington, and in June, 1968, the first graduation was held for 137 students. Additional campuses were later established at the former Howard School in West Bridgewater and the Miramar School in Duxbury.

Groundbreaking for the first five buildings of the permanent Brockton Campus occurred in 1969, and by 1972 the campus was officially opened. During this time, the College received its first accreditation from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. By 1978, the five remaining buildings of the campus were completed.

In 1985, the Blue Hills Technical Institute, itself in existence since 1966, formally merged with Massasoit Community College, and is now the Canton Campus.

In 2009, the Massasoit Community College's Workforce Development Division moved to the Conference Center. The Conference Center is available for a vast array of community service and corporate events. We also emphasize working with local groups to promote workforce development opportunities for the college's service region.

The Conference Center at Massasoit

Conveniently located at 770 Crescent Street (Route 27) in Brockton, The Conference Center at Massasoit (formerly Christo's II) opened in 1997 as a full service facility for business meetings, civic, educational, state, cultural profit and non profit organizations. With two full service bars, new Wi Fi compatibility and over 7,200 square feet of floor space, the Conference Center can accommodate all of your needs. Our full time experienced staff stands ready to prepare and serve a wide variety of food and beverages.
